Temperance and labor are the two best physicians of man.

Poverty and hunger have many learned disciples.

Whatever makes men good Christians makes them good citizens.

As you go forward in life, never expect too much, never hope for too little.

The protection of God cannot, without sacrifice, be invoked but in behalf of justice and right.

Show us the man who never makes a mistake and we will show a man who never makes anything.

Men are so constituted that everybody undertakes what he sees another successful in, whether he has aptitude for it or not.

The world is looking out for the best things, and what we want is to show that the religion of Christ is the best in the world.

Every great man exhibits the talent of organization, of construction, whether it be in a poem, a philosophical system, a policy or a strategy. And without method there is no organization nor construction.

The people of the United States read and support as many newspapers as England, France and Germany combined.

An appropriation for teaching Latin and Greek in the public schools of Detroit has been refused. French and German are to be taught.

The bronze statue of the late Commodore Vanderbilt, the founder of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., will be unveiled in the parthenon at the Centennial Exposition, on May 27, the anniversary of his birth. Mr. Depew will deliver the oration.

Frederick H. Rindge, long a resident of California, and who has given his native town of Cambridge, Mass., a city hall, a public library building and a manual training school at an expense of more than $1,000,000, has decided to return to Cambridge to live and to educate his children.

Honor to Grant.

NEW YORK—As a tribute to the memory of General Grant, Yang Yu, former minister from China to the United States, today planted a tree in the ground under which the casket of General Grant lay for twelve years. The tree is called gink gobilo-ba by Chinese botanists, and is said to grow to a height of about one hundred feet. Colonel Fred Grant, Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Julia Grant were present, and after a brief speech by Samuel McMillin, president of the park board, the minister took a spade, threw a little earth around the root of the tree and then read his speech.

"This tree is planted," he said, at the side of the tomb of Ulysses S. Grant, ex-president of the United States of America, to commemorate his greatness by Li Hung Chang, guardian of the prince, grand secretary of state, earl of the first order.

Released for Her Little Son's Sake.

"Where's me mudder?" earnestly queried a small urchin in the police court, Newark, N. J., Tuesday.

"I don't know, my son," said Judge Eggers kindly, peering over his desk at the morsel of humanity. "Do you think she's here?"

"Youse knows she's here," was the reply. Then the boy went back of the desk and talked confidentially for a few moments with the magistrate. The latter gave an order, and a bedraggled woman was led into court. She had been sentenced for drunkenness earlier in the day.

"Your son has pleaded for you," said the judge. "and I am determined to let you go for his sake, if you will try to do better."

"I'll take the pledge, I will!" cried the woman with tears. "I'll never drink again."

She signed the pledge, handed it to Judge Eggers and then, hand in hand with her son, started for the door.

"Thank yer, judge," called out the little fellow.

"You brave, noble little boy," replied the magistrate rather irreverently. Then he wiped his glasses and called the next case.—New York Journal.

ASTOR WILL WIN HIS BET.

A Block of Redwood Big Enough for a Table of Forty.

SAN FRANCISCO—A big slab of redwood, a cross section cut from a log 14 feet 4 inches in diameter, with the bark peeled off, was lowered yesterday into the hold of the German ship Maria, Hackfeld at Long Bridge, bound for London.

The big block of wood is consigned to William Waldorf Astor and is intended to decide a wager. At a recent dinner party given in London to a select circle, some stories were told that flavored with hyperbole. Astor was responsible for one in which the big trees of California figured. A young English blood doubted the existence of such trees. There were just forty guests at the dinner and Astor, to prove his assertion, offered to wager that a table big enough to accommodate forty at dinner could be made from a cross-section of one of California's trees. The wager was accepted and the shipment on the Maria Hackfeld is the result.

The piece of redwood was cut from one of the many giant trees of Humboldt county. There is not a knot or blemish in the whole piece. Heavy wire cables were bound around its outer rim and heavy planks protected it from being split. It is about three feet thick and weighs about nineteen tons. It was brought from the lumber woods on the steamer National City, and the ship's hatchway just gave the slab a play of one inch as it was being lowered into the hold.

Wolf Farming.

A large number of counties were awarded their wolf bounties from the state. The total amount paid was larger than it will ever be again, unless the new law passed last winter is repealed, and wolf farming is encouraged. Acting under the authority given by this law, the county commissioners of Otter Tail and Cottonwood counties have announced that they will pay no more bounties, and other counties are preparing to follow suit. The expense of these bounties under the old law was divided between the county and the state, and it was beginning to be an expensive matter. Strangely enough, to the uninitiated, some of the older counties, notably Houston and Wabash, come in for a much larger portion of the bounty than any of the newer counties, where wolves would naturally be expected to abound. Houston county, for instance, comes in for more than four times the amount called for by Aitkin, and at least three times as much as any other county in the northeastern part of the state. Otter Tail county comes in for over $500, and leads the list in amount. No charges have been made that there is anything wrong with the northern counties, but it is said the amount of bounties paid proves a clear case of wolf farming in the older southeastern counties like Houston and Wabash. Three or four of the counties will receive no money from this apportionment, as the claims are paid in the order they have been sent in, and these counties did not present their claims until after the fund had been exhausted. The total amount allotted is $5,530.14.

Secret. y Murton's circular sitting apart the native ponies at Fort Worth, Tex., opens up a new route for Arizona cattle to the Pan Handle of Texas, Oklahoma, Texas, Southern Kansas and parts of Colorado. This is a smooth route. Thin cattle can be shipped over this route in the spring and very late in the fall without danger of loss from cold weather, as there are no mountains to cross by this line. Mr. C. C. French, joint agent of the T. & R. and C. R. I. & P., is visiting every important shipping station along the S. P. and explaining the merits of his route to the cattle people. He thinks Tucson should have a population of 50,000 inhabitants and would have if the eastern invalids knew the truth about the wonderful climate of Arizona, and that when the people of the east cease to get their information from Puck and Judge, about Alkali Ike and Arizona Pete, both countries will be better off.—Tucson Star.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c and $1 per bottle at D. J. Brannen's drug store.
